17	Learning, teaching and assessment methods Learning is achieved through a balance of formal pedagogy and independent study, with an emphasis upon the latter, suitable to this level of study in the social sciences. Options module teaching is done primarily via seminar group, with occasional lectures; and in one-to-one tutorials as and when necessary. A core module – Theorising Gender – has a component lecture series. The dissertation module includes research training workshops. Where appropriate, use is made of on-line resources including Moodle. Assessment is via written work, with a different essay (or equivalent) for each module. The dissertation module is composed 15% coursework related to research skills and literature review and 85% for the dissertation itself.

18	Programme Description
	The programme consists of four taught modules and a dissertation. All students take the core module 'Theorising Gender' in the first term of their degree. They then have a choice of a further three option modules (taken across two years for the part-time degree, or within one year for the full-time degree). At least two of these options must be taken from a designated MSc Gender, Sexuality and Society options list. There is also a dissertation module which incorporates skills training. Students receive one-to-one supervision for their dissertation research, and the dissertation is then submitted at the end of September in the year in which the degree is completed.
