Admissions requirements

A second-class honours degree (2:2 or above). This requirement may be waived if a candidate can demonstrate exceptional talent.

Candidates will be asked to submit a portfolio consisting of 1,500 words of creative writing (this can be a piece of fiction, a collection of poetry, or a script) and 1,500 words of critical writing (about a literary text), a personal statement (to be submitted with the application form which outlines why they would like to study for this course) and two academic/professional references.

Students are selected on the basis of their portfolio, statement, references, an interview (selected candidates only) and their degree.

International Students Entry Requirements:

If English is not their first language or they have not previously studied in English, the requirement for this programme is the equivalent of an International English Language Testing System (IELTS Academic Test) score of 7.0, with not less than 6.5 in each of the sub-tests.

Course aims

The MA in Creative Writing and Contemporary Studies at Birkbeck is taught by one of the most vibrant departments in London. For 17 years we have been enabling dynamic groups of students to improve their creative work and develop as writers. We have a growing list of published and prizewinning authors whose work started life in our seminars. If you have been writing creatively for a while and feel the need for professional support and feedback and the guidance of published authors and a cohort of like-minded people, then this course is for you.

The MA Creative Writing and Contemporary Studies aims to:

- develop to a professional level the craft of writing in various genres.
- develop student confidence, sensitivity and discernment in their analysis of their own and their fellow students' work.
- provide students with experience blended learning in the interconnected fields of creative writing and critical thinking
- combine both practice-based learning with specialism in contemporary literature, culture, and criticism, as well as the development of student's own creative writing projects.
- explore critical methods and debates on experimental literature, media, popular culture, technology, and cultural development.
- give students the opportunity to develop both their critical thinking skills as well as fiction and non-fiction writing skills.
- develop a greater critical understanding of contemporary literary developments.
- place student's writing in the context of developments in contemporary poetry, screenwriting, fiction and creative non-fiction.
- develop to professional level skill in editing of both students' own and fellow students' creative work.
- cultivate a greater practical knowledge and understanding of the markets for poetry, fiction, screenwriting and non-fiction.
- allow students the opportunity to produce a dissertation of high literary quality.

How you will learn

Your learning and teaching is organised to help you meet the learning outcomes (below) of the course. As a student, we expect you to be an active learner and to take responsibility for your learning, engaging with all of the material and sessions arranged for you.

Each course is divided into modules. You will find information on the virtual learning site (Moodle, see Academic Support below) about each of your modules, what to expect, the work you need to prepare, links to reading lists, information about how and when you will be assessed.

Your learning for this course will be organised around the activities outlined below.

Teaching on the programme is varied. Modules at Levels 7 are typically taught by lectures, seminars, and workshops, as well as through individual supervision sessions for the Dissertation. Some modules include one-to-one tutorials by arrangement (for example to discuss essay feedback or feedback on your creative writing).

Lectures are designed to provide you with an outline or overview of the topic, to engage you with the material and direct you to other resources. They are a springboard for your own learning. Seminars are group sessions where you will be asked to contribute to discussion or group work around the topic, with material set in advance for which you need to prepare. Workshops based on more hands-on exercises that allow you practice skills such as close reading and critical analysis.

Other important modes of learning include: note-taking, textual analysis, private study, library and archival research, use of internet sources, as well completion of the assessed work.

How we will assess you

Assessment methods used on critical modules on the MA Creative and Critical Writing includes commentaries, essays as well as a wide range of exercises designed to evaluate different abilities and prepare students to the range of genres, lengths, and writing skills required in the twenty-first-century workplace. Assessment for Creative Writing modules is 100% coursework. Teaching is varied and interactive, and takes the form of lecturer-led sessions on elements of craft, workshopping of students' creative work, class and home exercises, student readings, individual and group work. It also includes:

- Plenary lectures to year groups to allow for general exposition of craft elements and instruction therein, as well as to disseminate course-related information and to foster a sense of community amongst students.
- Branch-off workshops following lectures, encouraging student participation in general discussion and the use of weekly student presentations. This encourages development of communication skills in small groups and promotes exploration of material presented in the lecture.

A Dissertation combining creative and critical writing is a compulsory requirement of the MA Creative Writing and Contemporary Studies.

Learning outcomes (what you can expect to achieve)

By the end of the course, students will be able to:

1. Demonstrate control of elements of the writer's craft to a high degree in their own work.
2. Use language confidently, precisely, and imaginatively.
3. Discuss and evaluate the work of fellow students and established writers in relation to elements of craft to a professional level
4. Utilise critical skills in the close reading and analysis of creative texts to a proficient level.
5. Articulate their knowledge and understanding of the various forms and genres of creative writing and the different techniques and processes they employ.
6. Display confidence and fluency in their own writing.
7. Employ skills in researching relevant fields of knowledge and developing drafts of their work to an impressive level.
8. Use knowledge and understanding of contemporary writers and writing in new creative work.
9. Share a portfolio of creative and critical work (with which the student can pursue publication or entrance onto higher-level programmes, such as a Practice-based PhD at Birkbeck.
10. Employ research skills, including the ability to gather, sift, and organise material independently and critically, and to present it in the form of an essay, report, dissertation, presentation or written creative piece.
11. Use relevant IT skills; the use of libraries and electronic sources of information, online discussion groups, web-based research, to further their creative and critical writing to a high level.
12. act as a reflective, self-directed learner, recognizing and employing a range of strategies to support independent learning, including a sophisticated and nuanced awareness of strengths/weaknesses.
13. respond more effectively to the work of others; to participate in workshop or small group discussion by listening and contributing ideas in a sensitive and informed manner.
14. accept and evaluate constructive criticism on your own work; effectively participate in workshop or small group discussion by listening to feedback of fellow students and lecturers.
15. communicate in public and in working groups with clarity and sophistication.
16. Produce a viable, original extended creative-critical writing project in consultation with a supervisor.

Academic regulations and course management

Birkbeck's academic regulations are contained in its Common Award Scheme Regulations and Policies published by year of application on the Birkbeck website.

You will have access to a course handbook on Moodle and this will outline how your course is managed, including who to contact if you have any questions about your module or course.

Support for your study

Your learning at Birkbeck is supported by your teaching team and other resources and people in the College there to help you with your study. Birkbeck uses a virtual learning environment called Moodle and each course has a dedicated Moodle page and there are further Moodle sites for each of your modules. This will include your course handbook.

Birkbeck will introduce you to the Library and IT support, how to access materials online, including using Moodle, and provide you with an orientation which includes an online Moodle module to guide you through all of the support available. You will also be allocated a personal tutor and provided with information about learning support offered within your School and by the College.

Please check our website for more information about student support services. This covers the whole of your time as a student with us including learning support and support for your wellbeing.

Quality and standards at Birkbeck

Birkbeck's courses are subject to our quality assurance procedures. This means that new courses must follow our design principles and meet the requirements of our academic regulations. Each new course or module is subject to a course approval process where the proposal is scrutinised by subject specialists, quality professionals and external representatives to ensure that it will offer an excellent student experience and meet the expectation of regulatory and other professional bodies.

You will be invited to participate in an online survey for each module you take. We take these surveys seriously and they are considered by the course team to develop both modules and the overall courses. Please take the time to complete any surveys you are sent as a student.

We conduct an annual process of reviewing our portfolio of courses which analyses student achievement, equality data and includes an action plan for each department to identify ongoing enhancements to our education, including changes made as a result of student feedback.

Our periodic review process is a regular check (usually every four years) on the courses by department with a specialist team including students.

Each course will have an external examiner associated with it who produces an annual report and any recommendations. Students can read the most recent external examiner reports on the course Moodle pages. Our courses are all subject to Birkbeck Baseline Standards for our Moodle module information. This supports the accessibility of our education including expectations of what information is provided online for students.

The information in this programme specification has been approved by the College's Academic Board and every effort has been made to ensure the accuracy of the information it contains.

Programme specifications are reviewed periodically. If any changes are made to courses, including core and/or compulsory modules, the relevant department is required to provide a revised programme specification. Students will be notified of any changes via Moodle.

Further information about specifications and an archive of programme specifications for the College's courses is available online.
